USING WEBEZ™ FOR LIMITED BUDGETS AND RESTRICTED TIMELINES

CASE STUDY

BACKGROUND

An international contract research organisation approached Almac with a critical need for an IRT solution for a phase IIA, double-blind, North American study involving 10 sites and 32 patients.

CHALLENGE

Services were contracted by the CRO, on behalf of the sponsor, with an IRT vendor that suddenly could not meet the previously agreed upon timelines. They were facing a delay in the start of the trial. To make the situation more challenging, the time remaining to first patient in (FPI) was extremely tight, requiring that the IRT be built and operational within three weeks. Additionally, the solution needed to be a low cost, flexible configuration that met their current protocol design.

SOLUTION

Due to the protocol requirements of this study, we were able to suggest WebEZ™ for this project. WebEZ is a pre-validated, configurable IRT solution that can be built and deployed very quickly. In this case, the system was configured to the client's needs, built, and deployed within two weeks – and it met the requirements of the protocol design. As an added benefit, the client also contracted us to provide packaging, distribution, and supply chain management services for this project. This further streamlined the study start-up and provided the client with the ease of having one contact, an Almac Supply Chain Manager, to oversee the clinical supplies and randomisation aspects of the protocol.

RESULTS

The use of WebEZ, our supply chain management expertise, and the resulting streamlined processes of dealing with one project contact and vendor, enabled the project to fully meet the sponsor's strict cost and timeline requirements.
